About our presenters:

Amanda Bohlen, Extension Educator, M.Ed., Ohio State University Extension, Washington County and Area Leader for Belmont, Guernsey, Noble and Monroe Counties.

Her passion lies in teaching where she encourages lifelong learning by developing highly engaging and effective classes. Amanda has a background in Family & Consumer Sciences education where she put her skills to use teaching high school for 7 years. Her experience plus knowledge of curriculum and instruction enables her to create fun and interactive lessons for all ages to enjoy. Her specializations are wellness, early childhood, and food safety.

Marcus McCartney, Washington County Agriculture and Natural Resources Educator

Marcus began his career with OSUE in July 2014 in Meigs County as their Agriculture and Natural Resources educator while working part-time at DuPont – Washington Works in Washington, WV. In October 2015, he became the Agriculture and Natural Resources in Washington County.

He actively engages with clientele, implements agriculture and horticulture programs for youth and adults, coordinates the OSU Master Gardener program, participates in state-wide studies and research, and serves on local and state committees. His specialization is soils, small ruminants, and horticulture. He is a member of the GAP (Good Agriculture Practices) team, Beef Team, Direct Marketing team and the Master Gardener Volunteer State Advisory Committee.

Marcus received his Bachelor of Science in Business Management from WVU in 2003 and completed his Master's degree in agriculture in 2014 from WVU.

Marcus is also a military veteran. Thank you for your service!
