What services and programs are offered by the Washington County Board of DD?

The Washington County Board of Developmental Disabilities operates a county agency providing direct and contracted services on a daily basis for residents of Washington County who are living with Developmental Disabilities, their families, and caregivers.

Our programs for individuals with developmental disabilities serve a wide range of age groups. From Early Intervention to the aging population, we are able to provide services to support the lives and goals of individuals and families in Washington County.

Our organization values being open to new ideas, working on improving our services, meeting our commitments, displaying a level of understanding for those that we serve, recognizing our achievements as well as our challenges, respecting others, and having open communication.

We are dedicated to community integration for all people living with developmental disabilities.

About our presenter:

Jamie Huck has 20 years of experience working with youth and families of Washington County with 16 years working as a Service and Support Administrator (SSA) for those with developmental disabilities served by the WCBDD. She is a graduate of Capital Law School with an undergraduate degree from Marietta College and Waterford High School Alumni. Jamie is passionate about enhancing the lives of individuals with developmental disabilities through the use of available resources and connections.
